The Catch-22 Miracle Field was created because "Every child deserves a chance to play ball." The project was spearheaded and initiated by former St. Louis Cardinal catcher, Mike Matheny, whose wish it was to construct a field for children with special needs. The Catch-22 Miracle Field, located at the Chesterfield Athletic Association, is an adaptive and totally accessible baseball field designed for people of all ages and all ability levels. In fact, the Governor's Council on Disability awarded this field The Excellence in Universal Design and Technology Award. The synthetic surface featured on this field and the barrier free design, unlike other fields constructed in the past, allow those who have not been able or allowed to play ball before because of limited mobility (using wheelchairs, walkers, crutches, or braces) the opportunity to participate in the games to the best of their ability. The field was dedicated on August 19, 2005 by Mike Matheny and is now ready for use. Additional funding from Albert Pujols and others
